Master Lock changes the game with new Built-In Combination Lock

(MILWAUKEE, WIS.) – April 22, 2014 – Master Lock Company LLC has introduced the 1652 Series Built-In Combination Lock, featuring an all-new button-less combination change process that will save a considerable amount of maintenance time. This revolutionary institutional locker lock for single point latch lockers is reliable and secure with an easy-to-dial three digit combination. It also sports a sleek dial design for easy gripping.

The button-less combination change process allows rotation to the next pre-set combination without having to open the locker door; everything is done completely on the outside with a control key. This process also prevents the possibility of an accidental combination change due to an overstuffed locker since there is no button inside the locker.

The 1652 sports an octagonal shaped dial with an extra-long spring action bolt that assures users the locker door will lock automatically. Model 1653 is available for left hinged doors and models 1651MKADA and 1656MKADA can be ordered for ADA compliance. Metal dials are available in five different colors: red, blue, green, purple and black.

“The brand new combination change process is a major convenience factor. The maintenance staff already has plenty of things to do on their schedule and the new 1652 combination change process will save them valuable time,” indicated Kevin McCarthy, Master Lock Product Manager for Locker Locks.

“Changing the combination is very easy to do and you can even leave the door closed. It’s as easy as inserting a key and rotating the dial, all completely from the outside of the locker. No more opening every single locker door; it’s that simple. We have been promoting the 1652 via social media for the last month and based on the response we've received on Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and LinkedIn, there is a lot of interest and excitement in this lock.”
